

---

Being Jewish on Campus

University is an exciting, yet daunting experience. You are finally leaving the warm, comfortable confines of home and are heading into a completely new and alien territory. This means that you need to prepare yourself as best as possible for the challenges, both positive and negative, which may lie ahead.

Being Jewish on Campus adds an extra element to your experience of University life. Issues such as keeping kosher, Shabbat and services can often be open to your questions and are all something which a Jewish student may have to contend with during his/her studies.

Fortunately, many campuses have very active JSUs, along with representatives from a number of Nottingham and Manchester's thriving Jewish student communities with kosher food available and prayer services run by students.

Chaplaincy (formerly known as University Jewish Chaplains) have Chaplains covering many campuses who provide support services and often extend to helping students to find friends on Shabbat, listening to their concerns and offering friendly advice if needed.

Tribe has local Campus Ambassadors who run events and inform students of the latest news from Tribe and the US. To get in contact with a Campus Ambassador, click here [1].

Date Uploaded: Tuesday 17th December 2013

---

Source URL: <https://www.tribeuk.com/article/being-jewish-campus>

Links

[1] <https://www.tribeuk.com/category/campus-ambassadors>